The subject was an employee with the company and the company called patrol back because the subject still had property locked in his toolbox belonging to the company. Patrol made contact with the subject and advised him of the concern stating he didn't have any property of the company. After a little bit more discussion the subject opened up his toolboxes and the property was found in the toolbox. It is highly possible that the subject overlooked the small item and wasn't intending on stealing. Property returned to the owner and Patrol left the area.
